Introduction to the Scholarship Guide

External scholarships are managed and awarded by outside organizations and intuitions independently of NEOMED. These scholarships have a wide range of award values and are targeted at students with a variety of backgrounds and interests. Additionally, external scholarships each have a unique set of application criteria and deadlines and students should be mindful of these details as they apply. We encourage you to explore and apply for outside scholarships.

The following list represents just a fraction of the online scholarship websites.

The information provided is based on information presented by the outside organization at the time of publication. All information is subject to change, and availability is based on the foundation's providing the opportunity. Questions on the opportunities should be directed to the organization offering the opportunity.

Outside scholarship funds are considered a resource to a student's ability to meet educational cost. You must notify the Office of Financial Aid immediately of all scholarships received.

Students should take all precautions when applying for external scholarships. Scammers take advantage of that, saying they'll help you get financial aid or scholarships but really, they are trying to take your money or steal your personal information. Learn more on how to avoid scholarship and financial aid scams on the Federal Trade Commission's website.
